TRUMP PAYS RESPECTS TO NAVY SEAL WHO DIED

President Donald Trump on Wednesday paid his respects to a U.S. Navy SEAL who died in a raid on al Qaeda in Yemen that went wrong, the first military operation authorized by Trump as commander in chief. Trump traveled to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware in an unexpected visit to meet with the family of William "Ryan" Owens, a chief special warfare operator who died in Sunday's dawn raid. The remains of the serviceman were sent to Dover, home to the largest U.S. military mortuary. Most of the visit was closed to the media. The U.S. military said 14 militants were killed in the raid in al Bayda province on a branch of al Qaeda known as AQAP. REUTERS

ACTIVIST IRE RISES AS PIPELINE REVIEW BEGINS

2 Activists protesting the Dakota Access Pipeline project expressed alarm on Wednesday after federal lawmakers from the state said the final permit had been granted for the project — a statement later contradicted by the Army, which issues such permits. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said on Wednesday it has started a review for the permit. But activists in North Dakota expressed anger over two lawmakers saying late on Tuesday that the final right-of-way for the pipeline had already been approved. The Army Corps of Engineers, on Wednesday, said the easement had not been granted. "The Assistant Secretary for the Army Civil Works will make a decision on the pipeline once a full review and analysis is completed in accordance with the directive," it said in a statement. REUTERS

TILLERSON CONFIRMED AS SECRETARY OF STATE

3 The U.S. Senate confirmed Rex Tillerson as President Donald Trump's secretary of state on Wednesday, filling a key spot on the Republican's national security team despite concerns about the former Exxon Mobil Corp. chief executive officer's ties to Russia. In the vote, 56 senators backed Tillerson, and 43 voted no. The tally was largely along party lines, with every Republican favoring Tillerson, along with four members of the Democratic caucus, Sens. Heidi Heitkamp, Joe Manchin and Mark Warner as well as Angus King, an independent. Democratic Sen. Chris Coons did not vote. REUTERS

TESLA DROPS 'MOTORS' FROM NAME

4 Tesla Motors Inc. changed its name to "Tesla Inc." as Chief Executive Elon Musk looks to transform the Silicon Valley firm from an electric car maker to a diversified energy products company. In October, Musk unveiled solar-powered roof tiles that eliminate the need for traditional panels and a longer-lasting home battery illustrating the benefits of combining his electric car and battery maker with solar installer SolarCity Corp. Tesla won approval in November from its shareholders to acquire SolarCity, for a stock swap deal worth about $2 billion, in which Musk was the largest shareholder. REUTERS

WELCOME TO METRO.US!

MATT PRIGGE, NATIONAL FILM EDITOR

Robert De Niro is on a roll right now. Over the last few months he's been sticking it to Donald Trump: making angry videos where he calls him names, reading a list of made-up Donald tweets during protests. He's funny, too, in "The Comedian," his new dramedy about a floundering stand-up comic. We talked to De Niro, as well as his co-star Leslie Mann, and the legend opened up to us about political comedy and doing stand-up himself, even if it was just for a movie. metro.us/movies

Wheaton College creates scholarship for refugees targeted under Trump's ban

Refugee advocates are calling the Norton, Massachusetts, school's decision among the best examples of leadership by any college.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
letters@metro.us

Wheaton College has just 1,650 students, but undergrads at the Massachusetts school hail from 76 countries.

That's why almost immediately after President Trump ordered a temporary ban on entering refugees from seven majority Muslim countries, school officials considered ways they could extend a helping hand.

The private liberal arts college located in Norton this week announced the Wheaton Refugee Scholarship, a full-tuition award for a student escaping conflict in their home country.

The scholarship gives preference to students from the seven countries mentioned in Trump's immigration order: Iran, Iraq, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen. The president's order, issued a week ago, lasts 90 days. Wheaton's scholarship is open to refugees who are already in the U.S. as well as those still trying to escape their countries.

Annual tuition at Wheaton, plus room and board is about $61,000. School officials said the college will cover "all costs of attendance," even the $60 application fee.

"Students from all over the world who wouldn't be here without financial support, my hope is that they go back and become leaders in their own country."

be here without financial support, my hope is that they go back and become leaders in their own country," said Wheaton President Dennis Hanno. "And the world is a much better place for the opportunity we provided them."

Hanno said the school has students currently enrolled who are from the countries listed in Trump's ban. He wants the scholarship to send a strong message to students and the world — not so much a political statement, but one about "maintaining the diversity and unique atmosphere" of his campus.

From Syria alone, there are an estimated 100,000 to 200,000 college-age refugees, according to Shyam Galyon, a campaign coordinator with Books Not Bombs.

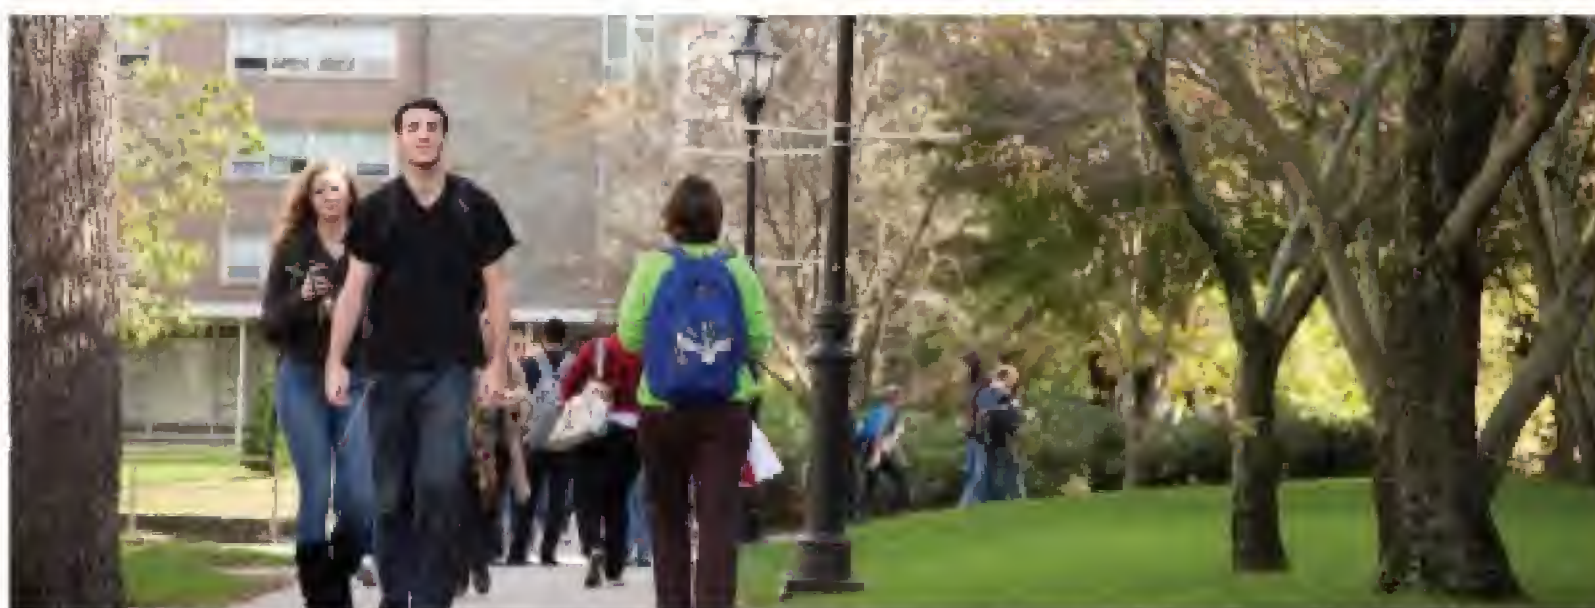

The group is a student-led campaign to create academic scholarships for Syrian citizens at American institutions by partnering with the non-profit International Institute of Education Syrian Consortium.

Galyon said she was excited to hear about Wheaton's scholarship.

"This is the strongest leadership we've seen from higher education," she said. "We encourage more university presidents across the country to do something similar."

Education, she said, is "human right."

"You don't need to be the genius in your class to deserve to go to school," she said. "There are a lot of qualified students, but the cost of higher education, especially after years of conflict, is unattainable."

Boston Marathon bombing survivor to marry fireman who saved her

The couple raced in Wednesday's Empire State Building Run-Up.

ERIN TIERNAN
@ErinTiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

Roseann Sdoia went to cheer on runners at the Boston Marathon finish line four years ago and lost her leg after the pressure-cooker bombs stationed nearby exploded. She didn't know then, but that wasn't all fate had in store for her that day.

As first responders rushed to assist the injured in the chaotic aftermath of the explosions, firefighter Mike Materia found his way to Sdoia, tying his belt around her badly injured leg as a makeshift tourniquet.

He rode with her in the ambulance, comforting her on the way to Massachusetts General Hospital, the New York

Post reported.

Sdoia, a long-distance runner, said Materia has been an integral part of helping her get back on her feet, both physically and emotionally ever since.

"She was like, 'Oh, did you see that firefighter? He's so cute.' And I was like, 'Mom, I just got blown up.'"

Roseann Sdoia

Continuing on the road to recovery, Materia was by Sdoia's side Wednesday as the pair raced in the Empire State Building Run-Up, a fundraiser for the Challenged Athletes Foundation that helps "people with physical disabilities can pursue active lifestyles," according to the race's website.

Sdoia and Materia are now engaged, but it was Sdoia's mother who pushed the pair together as her daughter recovered in the hospital.

"She was like, 'Oh, did you see that firefighter? He's so cute.' And I was like, 'Mom, I just got blown up,'" Sdoia told the Post.

But Materia visited a few days later and the pair struck up a friendship. By June they went on their first date and last month, with the help of the couple's dog, Sal, Materia proposed.

Sal was wearing a special dog tag that read, "Mike wants to know. ... If you'll marry him."

She said yes. A small wedding is planned for the coming fall.

Hillary Clinton to deliver Wellesley College commencement address

When Hillary Clinton delivered the first-ever student commencement speech at Wellesley College in 1969, she was Hillary Rodham, and she had no way of knowing that it would be the beginning of a long career in the spotlight.

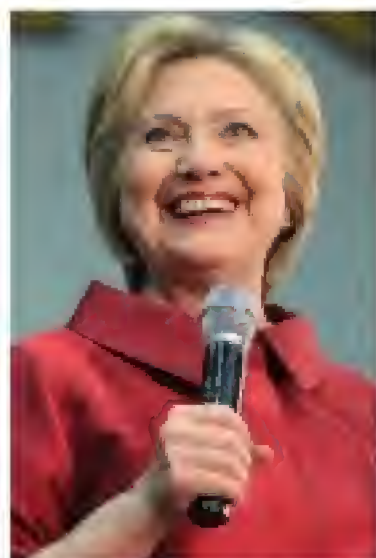

In May, she will return to address a new class of graduates.

It will be her third speech at the all-women's college in Massachusetts and will be one of her most visible appearances since losing the presidential election to Donald Trump in November.

Clinton has been relatively reclusive since her defeat, but is beginning to make more public appearances and has several other speeches planned over the coming months.

Win or lose, students said Clinton's leadership role in national politics over the last three decades has served as an inspiration.

"As Wellesley students, we arrive here believing

Hillary Clinton will deliver the 139th commencement address at Wellesley College on May 26. RUOM

in a future that respects women's potential and accomplishment, but as graduating seniors, and at this moment in history, we look to Secretary Clinton, our sister, as someone who will inspire us to make that future now," said Casey Butler co-president of the Class of 2017.

As first lady to her husband, President Bill Clinton, Hillary Clinton went on to become U.S. senator then secretary of state. Her two unsuccessful runs for president were still significant steps, which Wellesley said have long been part of Clinton's trailblazing role for women. They also noted Clinton's fight for women's rights and gender inequity. Perhaps as a show of support and as a thank you, students selected Clinton to speak at the May 26 graduation.

"She is the best person to represent who we have become at Wellesley and who we strive to be in the world. Her tireless push for progress embodies the spirit — and the courage — we seek in breaking down barriers and shattering glass ceilings of all kinds," Amal Cheema, co-president of the Class of 2017 said.

Clinton has pointed to Wellesley as the foundation to her career. She said Wellesley prepared her "to take on some of the rough-and-tumble" of a life in politics, and taught her "if you get knocked down, get back up."

Beyoncé is pregnant with twins!

Beyoncé just casually mentioned she's having twins on Instagram. Like, super casually. She posted a picture with the following caption: "We would like to share our love and happiness. We have been blessed two times over. We are incredibly grateful that our family will be growing by two, and we thank you for your well wishes. — The Carters"

Um, also? The art direction of this announcement is pretty amazing.

Beyoncé and husband Jay Z already have one daughter, the amazing and illustrious Blue Ivy, age 5.

Congratulations, you guys! We're freakin' out.

Kim and Kanye to release children's clothing line

You didn't ask for it, but it's coming: Kim Kardashian and Kanye West are apparently collaborating on a children's clothing line.

Kim recently revealed, via Snapchat, that she and husband Kanye would be launching a line of kids' clothes in the near future. According to People, daughter North modeled two pieces from the collection: a yellow sequin dress and a yellow shearling coat. Which makes sense, because what else is a 3-year-old going to wear on the playground? JK, North has never been on a playground.

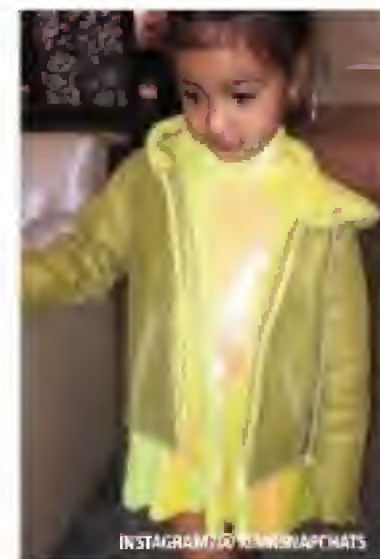

Both Kim and Kanye have dabbled in the fashion world before — Kim with a Kardashian Kids line with sisters Kourtney and Khloé, and Kanye with his very luxurious homeless chic Yeezy Season 4 collection.

The reality star only recently returned to social media, months after her brutal robbery in Paris.

Thank you to the couple for giving us yet another thing we don't really need and probably can't afford!

Angelina Jolie demands $100,000 a month in child support

Another day, another $100,000. Despite promising to keep the details of their divorce proceedings on the hush-hush, InTouch exclusively reports Angelina Jolie is making outrageous demands in her battle for sole custody against Brad Pitt.

The actress and philanthropist is asking for $100,000 a month in child support, to pay for all of the expenses and set up trust funds for each of the six children. Her team is proposing an additional $250,000 be set aside each year to be put in the trust by her almost ex-husband.

Just to put some things in perspective, Angelina Jolie is worth $160 million. Brad Pitt is worth $240 million. What I mean to say is, both of these people are LOADED. Surely, taking care of six kids is superexpensive, but also? This whole thing is just depressing.

First, the only couple worth caring about breaks up, and then all of this ugly stuff comes out? I am now convinced the concept of love no longer exists.

Wino forever

My, my, does Johnny Depp lead a lavish-ass lifestyle. According to Perez Hilton, details of said lifestyle have been leaked, thanks to a countersuit by Depp's former business-management company.

In January, Depp filed a lawsuit claiming that The Management Group collected $28 million in unauthorized contingent fees, never properly filed his taxes on time and loaned around $10 million of his money to third parties.

The very juicy complaint details the veteran actor's chronic overspending, alleging that being Johnny Depp alone costs him about $2 million a month. Depp, who increasingly appears to have merged with his "Pirates of the Caribbean" character, Jack Sparrow, allegedly spends $30,000 a month on wine. Which, #goals.

It's unclear whether he spends an inordinate amount of money on old fermented grapes to honor his infamous "Wino Forever" tattoo, or if the "Wino Forever" tattoo was to honor the fact that he is, in fact, the original wino. I'm hoping it's a little bit of both.

"THE LOBSTER" AMAZON PRIME

The majority of this year's Oscar nominees are or are from movies that — no surprise! — were released during Oscar season. So to catch up, you have to leave your house and buy a ticket. One title you can watch instantly, from the comfort of your recliner, is one of this year's unexpected moneymakers: That darkly comic dystopia in which single people have 45 days to find a romantic partner or else they're turned into an animal of their choice. "The Lobster" nabbed a nom for its imaginative — and in its second half tricky — screenplay, but we'd say it should have gotten another for Colin Farrell. As a lobster-bound divorced guy, he turns awkwardness into a beautiful, hilarious, deadpan art.

Jessica Barden and Colin Farrell look for love in "The Lobster." A24

"CAMERAPERSON" AMAZON PRIME

This year's Best Documentary Oscar quintet is strong, though one film that didn't make the list but should have is Kirsten Johnson's "Cameraperson." A longtime doc cinematographer, Johnson took odds and ends that didn't make their films' final cuts and spliced them together, as if one shuffle.

It's a diverse lot: war zones, a boxer walking off a lost fight, Johnson's late mother. She never tells us what to make of it all, freeing our minds to wander. You might even realize that, without ever making it explicit, it touches on untold issues involving documentaries, even life itself.

"O.J.: MADE IN AMERICA" HULU

One Oscar-nom'd film that might work best at home is this sprawling, exhaustive (but never exhausting) doc on the life of Orenthal James Simpson. Why? Because it runs nearly eight hours. Divided into five parts, it covers a life that once seemed to define the American dream, before taking a hairpin turn into its worst nightmare. Director Ezra Edelman gives himself acres of space to tease out all the complexities of Simpson's life and trial, in turn speaking to race, class and the way the media tells us both what we want to hear and what to think.

Where to celebrate Black History Month in Boston

A list of ways to educate, celebrate and commemorate.

Black History Month highlights the roles and stories of African-Americans in this country's history. It's a rumination on the cultures of two continents, Africa and North America, but the inclusive and respectful event is meant to be one of learning and celebration by all people. Here are a selection of events to do both throughout the month of February.

Berklee School of Music hosts the fourth annual Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration on Feb. 3, featuring a performance from the gorgeous Grammy-winning singer-songwriter India.Arie, and a keynote address from activist, author and Harvard professor, Sara Lawrence-Lightfoot.

Berklee will also present, Black Lives Matter: Sankofa, a student-produced musical presentation of the African diaspora, both historic and current, on Feb. 8. Sankofa is a word in the Twi language of Ghana that translates as "Go back and get it."

The current exhibition

"Visions/Revisions: What We Collect" is on display at the Schollay Square Gallery at City Hall. ALL IMAGES PROVIDED at the Schollay Square Gallery at City Hall, "Visions/Revisions: What We Collect," displays Hakim Raquib's photography montages of African art through Feb. 28.

Raquib is resident artist at the National Center for African American Artists, and part of the African American Master Artists in Residence Program at Northeastern University.

Barry Gaither, director at the NCAA Museum, curated this exhibition.

Enjoy a winter walk through Beacon Hill on The Museum of African American History's self-guided tour. The tour takes you to two National Historic Landmarks: the African Meeting House and Abiel Smith School, the nation's oldest public school for African-American children. Pick up a tour map in the museum's gift store.

Long before there was a Black Lives Matter movement, black activists in the tourist town of St. Augustine, Florida, fought oppression and injustice. The award-winning documentary film "Passage at St. Augustine" tells their story, one of the most harrowing in the civil rights campaign. Boston Public Library's Grove Hall Branch hosts a free screening Feb. 2 at 6 p.m.

At the Boston Center for Adult Education, a new exhibit, "Portraits of Purpose: A Tribute to Leadership," features a powerful collection of 107 portraits of African-American leaders and their allies by photographer Don West. The post-civil rights era collection pays tribute to Mel King, Nelson Mandela, Ruth Batson and more. The opening reception and meet-and-greet with the artist will be Feb. 3 at 6 p.m.. Required RSVP to <http://learning.bcae.org/rsvp>. The free exhibit will be on display through April 2017.

Come hungry and stay for as long as you like

If you're feeling helpless (welcome to the club), and haven't picked up a phone to call your local congressmen, or stood in a picket line, or donated to the ACLU ... here's something you can't find an excuse not to do: Go out to eat. Go eat at one of these immigrant-owned establishments, and support them during this very dark and troubling time. In lieu of this week's Eat Like an Insider, we asked some area food folks what their favorite immigrant-owned restaurants were, and we now turn to you to go indulge them.

ART

"Scenes From Late Capitalism"

Contemporary Marxists often refer to our current economic era as "late capitalism," characterized by a global market. Artist Nathan Heuer explores the results of globalism through architectural images that stand in for an abandoned American proletariat. One image shows a farmhouse seemingly dripping with blood, with "GUNS" painted above the door; another is a mobile home sardonically titled "The Boardroom." "Invisible Fractures: The Enduring Trauma of Emotional Abuse"

Rachel Tine created this exhibition, a mix of photography and audio, to reveal the inner world of victims of emotional abuse—a psychologically devastating form of abuse which is often tragically down played, despite evidence that its outcomes are even worse than physical abuse. Both the images and recordings are informed by the experiences of actual emotional abuse victims Tine spoke to.

Europe's nature-made bath houses offer a healing respite even in winter.

Fodor's Travel Gellert Baths

The Hungarian capital Budapest is renowned for its historic thermal baths, and the palatial Gellert Baths is the most famous. Opened in 1918, the complex is a collection of marble-clad, mosaic-decked soaking pools, with the centerpiece a spacious thermal pool flanked by carved stone pillars and stained glass and topped with a soaring glass dome. There's plenty of room to stroll here, and the architecture is stunning.

Terme di Saturnia

Set in a spectacular Tuscan countryside below a classic hill town, Saturnia's sulfur springs send up clouds of steam you can see for a mile. While locals dip in the calcium-decked open-air waterfall at the end of the hot stream, a few miles below town, the best place to take the waters is at the source, in the massive travertine pool around which the luxe Terme di Saturnia spa complex is built.

Gellert Baths. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Therme Erding

Self-styled as Europe's biggest hot spring spa, this glass-domed complex set in farmland outside Munich, Germany, is a thermal Disneyland with a selection of themed pools, saunas, solariums and lounges complete with a faux-tropical palm garden and swim-up bar. Therme Erding's spas are divided into two sections, family-friendly and "textile-free," and each covers the continent's attractions, from a Finnish sauna with its own Northern Lights show to an Ottoman-style relaxation lounge to hot tropical rain showers in a stone grotto. Other exciting attractions include wintertime hot water-slides for the kids, late-night pool parties for adults and several good restaurants to cover a full day's entertainment.

Terme dei Papi

The "baths of the popes" isn't just a fanciful name: Gregory IX started splashing around here in the 13th century. Boniface

IX came for a cure in the 15th, and Nicholas V built his country getaway here a few decades later. The hot spring in Viterbo, Italy, also gets a nod in Dante's "Inferno." Buy a day ticket to float in the 1930s-era stone pool and sprawl on a lounge chair.

Spreewald Therme

The mineral-rich hot spring that feeds the Spreewald Therme near Berlin was discovered just 12 years ago, but the spa makes up for lost time with a grand glass-and-steel complex reminiscent of a very fancy airport — one that just happens to be set in a rural town near the Polish border amid picturesque woods and fields. Inside are hot and cold pools, saunas, a restaurant and spa.

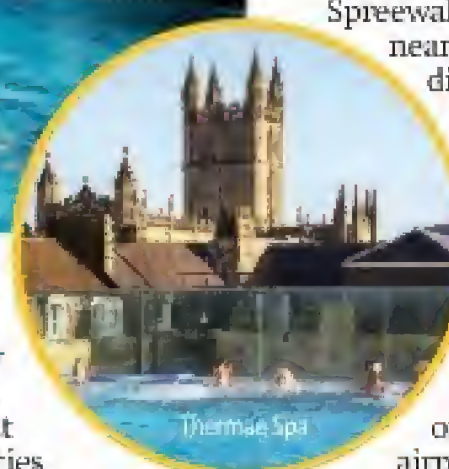

Therme de Vals

Hands-down Europe's chicest hot spring, the Therme de Vals near St. Moritz, Switzerland, sets its natural hot water pools in a stark, '60s-modernist architectural context, all slab walls and sunken staircases. Like the hideaway of a James Bond villain, it's built into a mountainside in the Alps. Inside, it looks like a very stylish nightclub but feels more like a church, as reverent bathers quietly immerse themselves in indoor and outdoor pools, "fire" and "ice" baths, and a sound installation.

Thermae

England's only hot spring spa dates to the 18th century, but it's been revered for its healing waters since the ancient Celts worshiped here more than 2,000 years ago. Today's Thermae Spa sits inside a UNESCO World Heritage Site, with a rooftop hot pool overlooking the city of Bath. Choose between the New Royal Bath's modern glass-and-stone complex and the historic Cross bath, a low-lit, atmospheric thermal pool situated on the site of the original Celtic shrine.

Martellus brings the fun to Foxboro

It didn't take long for Marcellus Bennett to make an impact with the Patriots.

JAMES TOSCANO
@jimmy_toscano
sports@metro.us

On March 16, 2016, the same day the news broke that the Patriots had acquired tight end Martellus Bennett from the Chicago Bears, Bennett posted a picture to his colorful Instagram account (@martellusb).

It was an older picture of him shaking Tom Brady's hand with a caption that read, "Hi Tom, I'm Marty. Let's do this."

Now Brady and Bennett are one win away from winning Super Bowl LI, Brady's fifth and Bennett's first.

You could say it's just how Bennett, who also calls himself the "Creative Director of Awesomeness at The Imagination Agency," drew it up in his mind.

And it's certainly how Bill Belichick and the Patriots front office drew it up in the playbook.

The tight end position is one that Belichick is very fond of, and he's been trying to find the right second tight end to pair with Rob Gronkowski ever since Aaron Hernandez ... well, you know.

Not only did the addition of Bennett add a complete tight end and second offensive weapon out of the tight end position, but it provided much needed depth at the position in case Gronkowski got hurt.

Well, Gronkowski began the season injured and played just five games before he was once again out of commission for the rest of the season.

In past years, that would have spelled doom for the Patriots. Not this year.

Bennett has been able to help soften the blow of missing Gronkowski with his pass-catching (55 receptions, 701 yards, 7 touchdowns in the regular season) and blocking ability.

But it's not just what he's been able to bring on the field, but also off the field. Never short on words - or jokes - Bennett has been able to keep the mood light when the situation calls.

"He brings a lot of energy," Devin McCourty told reporters this week. "I think every year we always have guys like that. I think for a long time [Jerod] Mayo was kind of the energy guy. I've never seen Mayo have a bad day. Marty coming in, he's been very similar to that. Always excited and a very unique personality. Guys really enjoy having him in the locker room. I think he's enjoyed being here. It's been a pretty good fit."

But it's certainly not all fun and games for Bennett. While teammates will mention his personality in one breath, they'll note how hard he works in the next.

You could say that Bennett was unhappy with his situation in Chicago. It's also easy to lose sight of the bigger picture when stuck on a losing team. But if being traded to the Patriots was a new lease on football life, Bennett has made the most of it.

"I just know that here - you have these goals all the time, individually. But here it was never really individual goals that I set," Bennett told reporters after stamping his ticket to Super Bowl LI. "From the moment I met my teammates, it was all about us and what can we do to get where we're trying to go. Everyone here believes. There wasn't a non-believer in this room at any time about going to the Super Bowl or what our goal was from the moment I got here in March or April. That rubs off on you."

"Iron sharpens iron and attitude is contagious. A winning attitude is contagious. I definitely got affected since I've been here. I've got the winning disease right now and I'm enjoying this one. I don't need the antidote."

Bennett has been relatively quiet through two playoff games, but tight ends were productive against the Falcons in the regular season. The Falcons allowed 84 receptions for 975 yards and eight touchdowns to tight ends, according to ESPN. The eight touchdowns were tied for sixth most in the NFL, and yards ninth most.

Whether he's on the receiving end of Brady's throws or helping to block on the line, Bennett will be a big part of Sunday's big game. And if all goes according to plan, he'll be able to post another picture on his Instagram account after the game with this caption: "Hey Tom, I'm Marty. We did it."

Bennett's best quotes

"I feel like I'm the Kanye of the NFL."

- to ESPN

"Yeah, I'm over it. It was fun while it lasted - like a good one-night stand."

- to WEEI, on winning the AFC East

"Goodell looks like a Pringles guy. I don't consider those chips."

- to WEEI

Aries You'll find it difficult to proceed with caution. Your desire to get things done your way will lead to both opportunities and obstacles.

Taurus You know what's best for yourself, so don't let anyone dump responsibilities on you that will deter you from following through with your plans. Avoid excess.

Gemini Try something new and get out and make friends with people who challenge you. Networking functions will encourage you to be more entrepreneurial.

Cancer Your emotions will be difficult to deal with. Trying to change what other people do is a waste of time. Concentrate on yourself and how you handle situations.

Leo Express your feelings and bring about the changes that will help you gain control over your life. Don't accept undesirable results when you can have so much more.

Virgo You need to handle money wisely. Demands are best kept at a distance. Don't fold under pressure or give in to someone using persuasive tactics.

Libra Strive to stabilize your life and your relationships. Seek compromise if it will help you avoid discord or loss. Change can be good if it's made with honorable intentions.

Scorpio Explore your ideas, and clear a space at home that will encourage you to engage in creative endeavors. Travel is best avoided. You will face injury if you aren't cautious.

Sagittarius Bring about positive changes at home by working to promote your ideas and plans for a better standard of living. Discipline and labor will be rewarding.

Capricorn Problems while traveling or dealing with financial institutions, government agencies or hospitals will surface. Evaluate each situation separately.

Aquarius Don't be afraid to act fast. You'll stay ahead of the competition if you take action. You can bravely make things happen.

Pisces Rely on people you know in order to drum up support for your projects. Honesty will help you cut through any confusion and will bring what you need. EUGENIA LAST
